The Frozen Eagle

Once a proud eagle perched on the tip of an iceberg floating swiftly down the river. The big bird seemed oblivious to the tremendous waterfall that lay ahead. At the same time, a hunter was walking down a path along the river's edge. Seeing the huge bird perched on the iceberg, the hunter clapped his hands and cried out, "Brother Eagle, fly away, fly away. There is danger ahead!" The eagle merely shrugged its great wings as if to say, "Don't bother me. I know what I'm doing." As the iceberg floated closer to the waterfall, the hunter again cried out, "Fly away, Brother Eagle! There is a waterfall ahead!" Again the eagle merely shrugged its wings, as if to say, "Don't bother me. I can take care of myself." At the moment, the eagle looked down just in time to see that the iceberg had reached the brink of the waterfall and was about to go over the edge. It spread its mighty wings and prepared for immediate take-off. But the eagle was unable to rise. Its claws were frozen to the ice and it went down with the iceberg.
